

THE NEW NORMAL: EMPLOYMENT AND IMMIGRATION ISSUES FOR FOREIGN WORKERS AFTER COVID-19

COVID-19 has ushered a new reality in the workplace, and foreign workers are one of the groups most heavily impacted by the changes that will be implemented in a return to work. Many foreign workers will find that their employment has been terminated, or their employer has ceased operations. Some will be working remotely. Others will be concerned with the possibility of exposure to the virus in their workplace. Against that backdrop, government authorities and the private sector are racing to implement policies and procedures to accommodate the new reality. A panel of US and Canadian immigration and employment experts will discuss what employers and employees need to know to carry on business in the new environment.
